

Amusements

"A RAGGED PRINCE" AT THE CRAWFORD

Beginning tonight and continuing for three nights and a Wednesday matinee, Mr. Albert Taylor and his company will present "A Ragged Prince," the great Spanish comedy in which the wonderful Salvini starred so many years. This comedy-drama is one of the strongest plays in Mr. Taylor's entire repertoire. It is a romance with a splendid love story, a military intrigue, a duel and all those other exciting little incidents which go to make a play enjoyable.

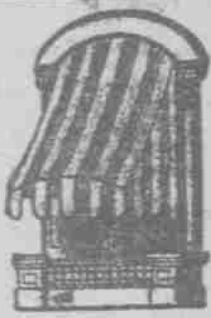

This is the last week of the Albert Taylor Stock Company and they intend to make the last week the best. The bill for the last part of the week is Sherlock Holmes, the great detective play, and for next Sunday, the last day, "The Game," Jack London's masterpiece, will again be presented.

SEATS TOMORROW FOR OPIE REID

Tomorrow morning tickets for the appearance of Opie Reid, who will be at the El Paso theatre Wednesday night, will go on sale at the International Book Store. Seats on the lower floor are $1.00; balcony 75 cents; gallery 50 cents. Those holding season tickets may secure reserved seats on the lower floor by paying 25 cents. Considering the merit of this attraction, the prices are exceedingly low.

Opie Reid, whose appearance here is under the auspices of the El Paso Women's Club, as they are in charge of all the attractions which constitute the Redpath Lyceum Course, is one of the best known of American journalists, authors, humorists and lecturers. His books are read in every land, and some of them will live as long as time, for they contain that one touch of nature which makes the whole world kin. Mr. Reid will give readings and impressions from the best of his works, which assures the audience of a real literary treat, for Mr. Reid is a speaker who has an excellent voice and a magnetic personality, all of which will make his inimitable stories even more enjoyable than they are on the printed page.

How About Your Awnings?

No matter how large or small, for the store front, office windows or your dwelling house windows, we are prepared to do the work on short notice, and cutting and fitting awnings is like a tailor cutting and fitting a suit of clothes—if they are not cut right, sewed right, and put up right they will soon bag and the wind will make short work of them. WE ARE THE OLDEST TENT & AWNING MAKERS IN EL PASO, and experts at the business.

We use high grade materials; that's why our awnings stand the wind and last longer.

EL PASO TENT & AWNING COMPANY

Let us figure on your work.

312 S. El Paso St. Phone 2044

TULAROSA WOMAN DIES; PERSONALS

Tularosa, N. M., March 11.—Mrs. Denford Ayers, who has been sick for some time, died at her home, nine miles west of town. The funeral services were held at the Union church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Pace, of Alamogordo. She leaves an aged husband and six sons, Fred Ayers being the only one here at the time of her death.

T. J. Smith is here from El Paso on a short business trip. J. C. Crayven is here from Alamogordo en route to Ocala to visit his brother, John Crayven, and family.

Watt Gilmore is here from his home on the Rio Grande.

M. McDonald is here from his ranch in the White Mountains, visiting with his daughter, Mrs. Charlie Hamilton, and children.

Ranch Turner is here on a short business trip from his ranch in the White Sands.

Frank Hillburn and family are expected to arrive soon from Ruidoso to make this their home.

A social gathering of the week was a birthday anniversary party given by Mrs. E. L. Nicholson, at her home.

Those in attendance were: Mrs. J. R. Howell, Mrs. James Holden, Mrs. J. L. Dale, Mrs. T. B. Meek, Mrs. A. C. Miller, Mrs. N. P. Chalk, Mrs. S. L. Nelson.

Gordon Murphy has left for Three Rivers, to be gone for several months.

Everett Daniels has left for Mesquite to look for a location for his family.

Author Douglas has gone to Three Rivers on a business trip.

E. H. Simmons is home from Alamogordo, where he has been attending court.

James Abbott, who left Wednesday for Alamogordo on business, has returned to his home here.

Miss Bertha and Floyd Alexander, of Carrizozo, who have been here for several days visiting with Misses Minnie and Madge Bourne, have returned to their home at Carrizozo.

John Meadows, who has been in Alamogordo on a business trip, has returned home.

Court has been in session at Alamogordo all week, but the Tularosa water difficulty was not finished.

A. L. Douglas got his shirt sleeve caught in the belt while working at his pumping outfit southwest of town Monday, and was nearly choked before he got himself loose.

The Home Mission society is to give a reception at the reading room next Saturday night from 7:30 till 10.

Full measure at Southwestern Fuel Co.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

San Diego, Cal., March 11.—About 5000 persons, who gathered at the police station in anticipation of possible demonstration from nearly 100 prisoners accused of violating the street-cleaning ordinance, were dispersed by streams of water from the city's fire hose.

Turn Home on Crowd.

Out Of Town Visitors

Mrs. W. C. Bradley, of Glendale, Cal., is visiting her niece, Mrs. C. E. Sawyer, of 1812 Montana street.

Miss Latta Jessup, of Mexico City, has arrived to be the guest of Miss Hallie Irvin. Miss Jessup has many friends in this city having lived here several years before going to Mexico.

M. L. Morgan, of Alamogordo, N. M., is in town on business, a guest of the St. Regis hotel.

W. B. Norton, of Albuquerque, N. M., is at the St. Regis for a short time. He is here on business.

Mrs. John Chapman, of Dallas, Tex., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stoker, of 1137 Arizona street.

Dr. W. T. Baird has as his guest Mrs. Wm. Baird, of Mountain Park, N. M.

Judge J. E. Bowen is up from Torrey, Tex., to spend a few days with his family.

Walter Baird has left for his home in Alamogordo, after a visit with friends in El Paso.

Mrs. L. F. Seaman, of Greenville, Tex., is visiting friends in El Paso.

W. P. Graham, of Candelaria, Chih., is a visitor in El Paso.

J. H. Paul, manager of the Delores gold mines in Chihuahua, is in El Paso.

J. C. Friedebloom is here from the Las Animas mining camp, N. M.

John Rickman and sister, Mrs. Ada Rickman, of Mayfield, Ky., arrived Saturday and will locate here.

Miss May Anderson, of Chih., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. R. Routledge.

El Pasoans Returning

Dr. F. S. Cary has returned from a short business trip to San Antonio.

Miss Wanda Race has returned from a visit in east Texas with friends.

Rev. J. J. Bullen and family, who are visiting in west Texas, expect to return the last of the month.

E. H. Devore has returned from a trip to Socorro, N. M.

J. C. Brown has returned from the Seven Lakes oil fields, New Mexico.

Receptions

The wives of the officers at Ft. Bliss will be "at home" to visitors on the first and third Thursday afternoons of the month.

A pain in the side or back that catches you when you straighten up calls for a rubbing application of BAL-LARD'S SNOW LIME MENTHOL. It relaxes the contracted muscles and permits ordinary body motion without suffering or inconvenience. Price 25c. Sold by J. L. D. 300 per bottle. Sold by Scott White & Co., three stores.

Capital I the Biggest Letter In the Alphabet

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

IT MAY not be the biggest letter in size, but it is mentioned oftener than any other. All of us like to speak it. The most silent of us will unbind and chat freely if some one introduces into the conversation that ever-interesting topic—ourselves.

A woman who was universally popular was asked by a friend how she made more acquaintances like her, with so little apparent effort on her part to please. The popular woman replied frankly:

"I encourage people to talk about themselves. One's self is the subject of which one never tires. When I meet a person who seems utterly impossible to me, I make an opportunity to say to him: 'Now what do you think of so-and-so?' and straightway his tongue is loosed, and all I have to do is to listen.

Verily she was wise in her generation, but how often she must have been bored.

All we remember the definition of a bore as, "a man who talks so much about himself and his affairs that he allows you no time to talk about yourself and your affairs." And if a man talking of his business and his own special interests is a bore to a woman, just think how a woman whose conversation is limited to her own sphere or work must bore a man.

More Life Interest.

For, deny it as we may, there are more things of interest to a woman in the life of the average man than there are of interest to a man in the life of the average woman. We are often edified and enlightened by hearing our husbands and brothers and their friends discussing political reform or the stock market. We feel that we can learn about those things from them and would be glad to know more about them, for they are of concern to us women. But what man is interested in hearing of "the trivial round, the common task" of housework, how the maid forgot to put on her white apron when she went to the front door, or how she ate all the huge chocolate cake that was left from Sunday night's supper, which should have lasted for at least two more meals? So long as the maid has dinner ready when he gets home, and it is a good one, and there is something for him to eat that he likes as well as he did the chocolate cake of delectable memory, what does the man care about the (to him) trivial details that preceded the satisfactory results? They are not part and parcel of his life as he sees it. And such being the case, he is bored by hearing of them.

To avoid being bores we must learn to get away from the personal side of things. Men claim that few women can do this, and we hear often on men's lips the story of the husband who remarked to his wife that women made a personal matter of every question produced at which his statement his wife protested with, "Oh, no, John; all women don't. I don't, so I!"

The husband, who she had proved the truth of his contention. Yes, one does get tired of the "I's." Don't you know how hard it is to get some persons to talk of abstract subjects? Discussion of such is delightful when personalities are avoided and generalities dealt with. But in a group of a half dozen people it is difficult to carry on any line of argument without hearing some one begin a sentence with, "Well, I know in my own case, that," etc. It is fatal to freedom of discussion. Of course, the I in every one's life is the all essential, most important letter. This is as true as that self-preservation is the first law of nature. But we

A New Silk Muff

The muff for warm weather is no novelty in Europe, but has never been taken up in America till this season, when several have been placed on view in the shops. The muffs are very large and made of light material. The illustration shows one made of pale violet chiffon over white with deep yellow lace ruffles showing at each end. Natural looking wild violets with foliage are used to trim it. The hat has a brim covered with the violets and a broad tulle shaped frame covered with foliage. The crown is held upright against the crown by a violet velvet ribbon. The crown is deep yellow straw.

About El Pasoans

A. M. Howland is improving from his recent illness.

Roxy Webb, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Mal Webb, continues very ill at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. A. M. Loomis.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Sauremann, of Government Hill, on Saturday, a ten pound boy.

Miss Annie Stokroff is recovering from an illness of several days.

Le Roy, the eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. John Schuller is ill at his home with scarlet fever.

Dinners and Luncheons

Mrs. J. R. Childress, of 2905 Bliss street, entertained with a well appointed dinner on Friday of last week, complimentary to Miss May Scholtz and Mrs. Leonard Hansen.

Cards

The Thursday Bridge Luncheon club was entertained on Saturday evening at Mrs. Maud Deane's home on Myrtle avenue. Mrs. Deane was assisted by her daughter, Miss Karma.

The members and their husbands were present and three prizes were awarded. The first club prize, a pair of silk hose, was won by Mrs. Paul Kirk; the second, a bunch of hand made roses, was won by Mrs. Will T. Swayer. The men's prize, a tie, was won by F. W. McConnell. A salad course was served. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Waller, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Swayer, Dr. and Mrs. Jones, of Chihuahua, Mex., and Mrs. Mary Wood of Chihuahua, Mex.

Mrs. Leon Miller was hostess Saturday of the Thursday Auction Bridge club. After the game, tempting refreshments of two courses were served.

The Silent Twelve club will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. T. Sullivan.

Mrs. Zach Cobb will entertain the Wednesday Bridge club on Wednesday afternoon, March 13.

Miss Fannie Henning will entertain at cards on Saturday afternoon.

El Pasoans Away

Mrs. H. T. Howie is visiting her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William McNary, at Berino, N. M.

W. H. Williamson left last week for Kansas to spend several weeks.

Ralph Fleck left Saturday for his father's ranch at Oro Grande, N. M.

Mrs. M. A. Tuller and daughter, Miss Maltre, left Sunday for Deming to visit Mr. Tuller.

Dances

Thursday evening the Wolverine Dancing club met with Miss Mary Weeks at 1512 Boulevard. After a business meeting the guests enjoyed dancing, and at 10:30 refreshments of a salad course were served. Those present were: Misses Mattie Hoover, Helen Rogers, Vivian Pomeroy, Helen Crichton, Janie Gammage, Messrs. Willie Lee, Ralph Mitchell, Joe Sheldon, Raymond Lee, Jim Rogers, Wade Smith.

The Saturday night dance at the Country club was well attended. Fourth, cavalry band furnished the music.

Joe Sheldon will be the host of the Wolverine Dancing club at the next meeting.

The Lodges

The Modern Woodmen of America will hold their monthly dance in their new hall at Herald building, on Wednesday, March 13.

Hills Bros' Teas and Coffee—Nations

picture of all the good things that might happen to one's self—for there the ego again enters in and causes a disturbance—but let it assist to the appreciation of the many happenings in the lives of those about one. The woman who does this will remember that behind the tactful, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she will not ask fretfully, "What's the matter?" or remark that she "should think that during the little while he is at home, he might be cheerful." If she exercises a little imagination she will appreciate that behind the taciturn, perhaps stern, demeanor of her husband, is the anxious brooding of the sorrow and the bliss that must be met, or concentration of thought on a certain business transaction that means gain or loss for him and privation or comfort for his little family. Then she